No trace has been found of the body of Alfred G. Vanderbilt nor of Lindon Bates, Jr., Justus Miles Foreman, the writer, nor of Mr. and Mrs. Elbert Hubbard. Survivors who arrived are confident that Mr. Vanderbilt perished.

Another passenger gives some word on the Hubbards. They had come on deck from the saloon after the blow and then turned to go below, apparently to get life belts. The ship went down before they could possibly return. It is the belief of many, confirmed by the reports of admiralty and steamship experts, that the Lusitania herself coffins hundreds of the dead, and there is serious discussion whether an effort shall not be made to blow up the hull in some way to release these bodies. She lies forty fathoms below the surface, which makes it too far down for divers to think of working there or to give any hope to the Cunard line that she may be lifted. Explosives, however, can be placed in her, and this may be

London, May 10 .- Among the first survivors to arrive in London was Oliver P. Bernard. He had been in Amerselves, or have been reported, and lica for six months in connection with a scheme for co-operative opera. His wife is the well known English singer,

> Mr. Bernard said he finished lunchstraight to the veranda cafe, where looking forward. In a moment he saw of the sea, at a distance of from 150 to 200 yards from the ship. At first he thought it was a fish's tail, but he that it might be a periscope. It was then forward of the Lusitania's bows.

The realization of what it actually had hardly crystalized in his mind when he saw the torpedo start. It made a frothy track until the very moment of impact.

'It seened to be just trickling said Mr. Bernard. "It was hard to att mpt to judge the pace of such a thing coming towards one, but it seemed to be traveling about five knots an hour. It was fired just as we came level with the submarine, and struck up between the second and third funne 1, under the forward cabins and the bridge. It seemed to me the torpedo must have penetrated clean through. Then a terrific explosion inside blew right up through the four decks, throwing up a great column of coal dust, water and debris of all kinds. I dashed into the cafe just in time, for down came the huge mass of water, breaking down the cutside awning. Some supposed this was sea water, but that is impossible. It was undoubtedly the contents of le reat water tanks taken up by explosion. I am sure only one torpedo struck the Lusitania. The ex plosion put out all lights.

"The crew and some of the passengers were now busy with the boats, though these proved of little use. There was no panic, Women and children were given first chance. I saw only one man clamber into a boat before it was lowered. He refused to get out and a sailor struck

The Cunard liner Lusitania was torredoed Friday by a German sub marine and sank. The Lusitania was naturally armed with guns, as were recently most of the English mercantile steamships. Moreover, as is well known here, she had large quantities of war materials in her cargo. Her eer the passengers were exposed hey alone bear all the responsibility for what has happened. Germany, on her part, left nothing undone to repestedly and strongly warn them. The imperial ambassador in Washing ton even went so far as to make a public warning, so as to draw attention to this danger. The English press sneered at the warning and relied on the protection of the British fleet to safeguard Atlantic travei."

Germany for the torpedoing of the Lusitania burst forth in a riot here. Mobs formed in the streets and raided German-owned shops. Several were literally pulled to pieces by the infuriated rioters, their contents being thrown over the streets. Police strove in vain to subdue the disturbers Twenty persons were arrested. The remainder of the crowd attempted a rescue and in the fighting which followed the police were forced to use their catons.

This is absolutely untrue. I saw the periscope of the submarine and saw the torpedo coming toward us through the sea. I watched its course and followed its bubbling wake until it disappeared beneath our counter. You might say I saw the torpedo strike the Lusitania, and the next instant the explosion occurred."

We took 800 English prisoners, among them sixty officers. French attacks west of Lievin and northeast of the Lorette height failed, with heavy losses for the enemy. Near ba Bassee and Vitry we forced an aeroplane of the enemy to land. A partial French attack undertaken with the aid of fog and bombs to the west of Perthes was beaten off by hand grenades.

Americans Must Be Calm

In this latest and by far the gravest crisis that has arisen since the beginning of the European war the American people look with confidence to President Wilson. They feel secure with the destinies of the nation in his keeping.

The President and official Washington fully appreciate the gravity of the crisis which the destruction of the steamship Lusitania precipitated. They are unwilling to take any action until all the facts are known and the claims of the German government are presented.

President Wilson, by maintaining silence and refusing, at this time, to express any opinion as to what course the government will pursue and refusing absolutely, to express words The Tawn is mine, and mine the fane of censure, has set a splendid example for the people to follow.

It is not proper for people to express their opinion too emphatically while the horror of the tragedy is still fresh.

The fact that more than six score of American citizens perished when the great ocean liner plunged to the bottom of the Irish Sea as the direct result of being torpedoed by a German submarine is calculated to inflame the people of this

This is a terrible time with more than half of the civilized world at war and all international law disregarded or openly violated by the European belligerents and the people must keep cool, act deliberately and without passion.

The German government has been asked for an official statement and when that statement is received the president will be better able to work out his course.

It is no time for jingo talk or idle criticism. The crisis is upon us and we must all stand by the man of peace who is warmer Monday; Tuesday increasing charged with the duty of guiding the nation through the most dangerous era of all history.

The American people have shown marvelous self control during the months of war which are now past and this latest erisis does not find them lacking in that regard. A firm determination to act only after mature consideration, guided by justice and, not passion or prejudice, will insure the safety of a great nation and a great people, now at peace in a world

Be calm and trust the President implicitly. Public sentiment must sustain his action in this crisis and in the other crises vet to come 'ere the war is ended, as it has in the past if his efforts to prevent this nation being plunged into war are to be crowned with success.

The Policeman's Task

One of the most important official personages our social plans provide for, one of the most depended upon and, in most instances, dependable public servants and at the same time, for crankiness and grouchiness when perhaps, the least appreciated is the policeman.

In large and small communities alike the policeman, as a billiousness, melancholia most often rule, is the object of ridicule by the young, of hatred by the are the result of impaired digestion criminal and of the disrespect of the law abiding citizen.

Nobody, aside from criminals, seems to care very much energetic. Blackmer & Tanquary, about a policeman unless it is to "make fun of him."

The people should wake up to the fact that the policeman is about the most necessary and most faithful of public servants. It is the policeman who guards the life and property of the citizen while the citizen is asleep. All through the lonely night he must be constantly on guard and there is scarcely an hour of the time he is on duty that the life of the policeman is not in danger.

The policeman is called for whenever danger threatens and he is expected to, and does, rush into the most dangerous places in search of violators of the law with never a thought for his personal safety.

Everyone of the multitude of dangerous duties he performs is accepted as a matter of course with scarcely ever a recognition which rises to the dignity of a thank you.

The man who becomes a policeman with the idea that he is only called upon to accept easy money soon arrives at a different conclusion, if he makes any serious effort to discharge these are appraised by experts erly trained he spends half the year his duty.

Of course there are exceptions to the general rule—there ues. So carefully have these Love may be blind. But jealousy are lazy, worthless, dishonest policemen, but the percentage is very small, in comparison to the large number. But it is is very small, in comparison to the large number. Americans Must Be Calm

In this latest and by far the gravest crisis that has arisen since the beginning of the European war the American people look with confidence to President Wilson. They feel secure with the destinies of the nation in his keeping.

The President and official Washington fully appreciate the gravity of the crisis which the destruction of the steamship Lusitania precipitated. They are unwilling to take any action until all the facts are known and the claims of the German government are presented.

President Wilson, by maintaining silence and refusing, at this time, to express any opinion as to what course the government will pursue and refusing absolutely, to express words The lawn is mine, and mine the fane of censure, has set a splendid example for the people to follow.

It is not proper for people to express their opinion too emphatically while the horror of the tragedy is still fresh.

The fact that more than six score of American citizens perished when the great ocean liner plunged to the bottom of the Irish Sea as the direct result of being torpedoed by a German submarine is calculated to inflame the people of this nation.

This is a terrible time with more than half of the civilized world at war and all international law disregarded or openly violated by the European belligerents and the people must keep cool, act deliberately and without passion.

The German government has been asked for an official statement and when that statement is received the president will be better able to work out his course.

It is no time for jingo talk or idle criticism. The crisis is upon us and we must all stand by the man of peace who is warmer Monday; Tuesday increasing charged with the duty of guiding the nation through the most dangerous era of all history.

The American people have shown marvelous self control during the months of war which are now past and this latest crisis does not find them lacking in that regard. A firm determination to act only after mature consideration, guided by justice and, not passion or prejudice, will insure the safety of a great nation and a great people, now at peace in a world

Be calm and trust the President implicitly. Public sentiment must sustain his action in this crisis and in the other crises yet to come 'ere the war is ended, as it has in the past if his efforts to prevent this nation being plunged into war are to be crowned with success.

The Policeman's Task

One of the most important official personages our social plans provide for, one of the most depended upon and, in most instances, dependable public servants and at the same time, perhaps, the least appreciated is the policeman.

In large and small communities alike the policeman, as a billiousness, melancholia most often rule, is the object of ridicule by the young, of hatred by the are the result of impaired digestion criminal and of the disrespect of the law abiding citizen.

Nobody, aside from criminals, seems to care very much energetic. Blackmer & Tanquary. about a policeman unless it is to "make fun of him."

The people should wake up to the fact that the policeman is about the most necessary and most faithful of public servants. It is the policeman who guards the life and property of the citizen while the citizen is asleep. All through the lonely night he must be constantly on guard and there is scarcely an hour of the time he is on duty that the life of the police man is not in danger.

The policeman is called for whenever danger threatens and he is expected to, and does, rush into the most dangerous places in search of violators of the law with never a thought for his personal safety.

Everyone of the multitude of dangerous duties he performs is accepted as a matter of course with scarcely ever a recognition which rises to the dignity of a thank you.

The man who becomes a policeman with the idea that he is only called upon to accept easy money soon arrives at a different conclusion, if he makes any serious effort to discharge these are appraised by experts erly trained he spends half the year his duty.

Of course there are exceptions to the general rule—there ues. ORDER OF THE BATH.

It Was a Realistic Ceremony In the Time of Charles II.

The last Knights of the Bath made according to the ancient forms were at the coronation of Charles II., when various rites and ceremonies, one of which was bathing, were enforced.

According to Froissart, the court barber prepared a bath, and the candidate for membership in the order, having been undressed by his esquires, was thereupon placed in the bath, his clothes and collars being the perquisites of the barber. He was then removed from the water to the words "May this be an honorable bath to you" and was placed in a plain bed quite wet and naked to dry.

As soon as he was quite dry he was emoved from the bed, dressed in new and rich apparel and conducted by his sponsors to the chapel, where he offered a taper to the honor of God and a penny piece to the honor of the king. Then he went to the monarch and, kneeling before him, received from the royal sword a tap on the shoulder, the king exclaiming. "Arise. Sir -...." and then embraced him. saying. A few weeks ago the last passenger pigeon died in Chicago at the age of twenty-seven years.

A passenger pigeon is quite a different looking bird from any other kind of pigeon. It has a long tail and is in all nearly three-quarters of a yard long. It is so called because of its migratory habits, it being a bird of passage.

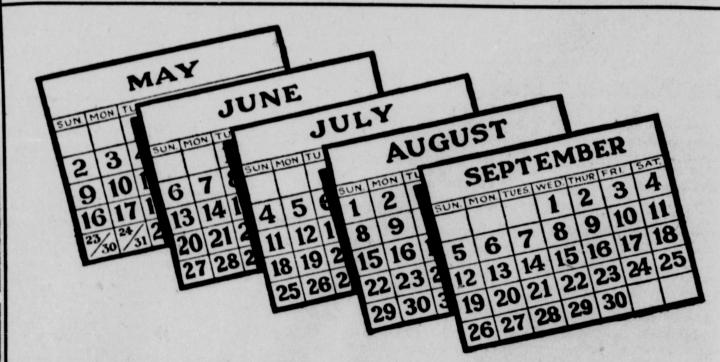

For the past fifteen years there had been a standing reward of $1,000 for a mate for this last survival of her race. This was several times its weight in gold, yet the offer produced no response. The passenger pigeon is absolutely extinct, and one of the most beautiful and useful of birds has been wiped out, as it were, under our very eyes.-New York Press.

ORDER OF THE BATH.

It Was a Realistic Ceremony In the Time of Charles II.

The last Knights of the Bath made according to the ancient forms were at the coronation of Charles II., when various rites and ceremonies, one of which was bathing, were enforced.

According to Froissart, the court barber prepared a bath, and the candidate for membership in the order, having been undressed by his esquires, was thereupon placed in the bath, his clothes and collars being the perquisites of the barber. He was then removed from the water to the words "May this be an honorable bath to you" and was placed in a plain bed quite wet and

As soon as he was quite dry he was removed from the bed, dressed in new and rich apparel and conducted by his sponsors to the chapel, where he offered a taper to the honor of God and a penny piece to the honor of the king. Then he went to the monarch and, kneeling before him, received from the royal sword a tap on the shoulder, the king exclaiming, "Arise, Sir -... and then embraced him, saying, "Be thou a good knight and true."-London Strand Magazine.

A few weeks ago the last passenger pigeon died in Chicago at the age of twenty-seven years. A passenger pigeon is quite a different looking bird from any other kind of pigeon. It has a long tail and is in all nearly three-quarters of a yard long. It is so called because of its migratory habits, it being a bird of passage.

For the past fifteen years there had been a standing reward of $1,000 for a mate for this last survival of her race. This was several times its weight in gold, yet the offer produced no response. The passenger pigeon is absolutely extinct, and one of the most beautiful and useful of birds has been wiped out, as it were, under our very eyes.-New York Press.

Asleep Indeed.

From the French trenches in Alsace comes a tale of a soldier who awoke one morning after a sound sleep, complained of a cramp in his thigh and said that he could not get up. At first his superiors asked that he do so, but as he steadfastly refused they sent for a doctor. The latter found that a bullet had come through the roof of the soldier's shelter during the night and had lodged in his thigh. It had not even waked him up all infantry classes from 1876, and that many trains loaded with troops are proceeding to the front."

The Germans were in possession of Hill 60, southeast of Ypres, on May 6, according to an official British statement from the front. There is nothing to indicate that it has been retaken by the allies.

French troops have advanced some two miles over a front of more than four miles, south of Carancy. Berlin announces fresh gains northeast of Ypres, in which two villages, the heights of which command Ypres, were taken.

The Austrian war office asserts that 100,000 Russian prisoners have been made in recent fighting in western Galicia and that Hungary has now been cleared of the invaders.

EQUATORIAL ECUADOR.

A Land of Earthquakes Nearly All a Mile Above Sea Level.

The traveler arrives in Guayaquil laden with quinine pills, but he learns that in a journey of a day he can reach the temperate zone. He brings summer clothing for a country crossed by the equator and nearly perishes on the frozen slopes of high mountains. He finds a government as unstable as the volcano shaken soil. He notes important industries that thrive upon these turbulent shores. Ecuador is a land of contradictions.

It is the land where the Incas ruled after they came into Peru. It was the birthplace of Atahualpa, who fell before Pizarro. It was from his capital at Quineto along the mountains that Gonzalo Pizarro rode out with Orellana to discover the Amazon.

The land which bears the name of the equator rivals her sister republics in variety of scenery and climate. Her feet rest on the dazzling chrome green shore of a tropic river; her head wears the fleecy crown of eternal snows. With one hand she points to the wide Pacific; with the other, to the matted jungle of the Amazonian valley. AN EVEN TRADE.

It Wasn't Made Simply Because the Law Wouldn't Allow It.

A traveling salesman for a Gansevoort street wholesale grocery firm, recently back from a trip through rough lands of a neighboring state, tells this possibly true tale:

"One day on my last trip I had a six mile ride to make to the county seat, and the small village in which I was had only one horse that I could hire and no other form of conveyance. I may say that a friend had landed me in the town that morning from his car, and I had sold goods enough to pay the expenses of the trip.

"Well, I got away on the sorriest specimen of a horse I ever straddled. and I was to send him back by the mail carrier, though not as a parcel post package. It took me two hours to cover the distance-1 was sorry enough I hadn't walked-and as I passed the county jail on my old bag of bones a face grinned at me from between the bars of a small square window. I was too sore to smile, but I nodded to the grin, and the prisoner called to me:

"'Say, mister,' he said, 'how'd you like to trade that critter for thirty days in jail?

enough to have traded, but the law wouldn't let me. and I rode on."-New ing, back to home and safety. York Sun.

THE THIRD NAPOLEON.

Spicy Pen Picture John Hay Drew of the French Emperor.

One of the best things John Hay ever wrote, says William Roscoe Thayer in his presentation in Harper's of Hay's er, "but them other two will never lay unpublished diaries, is this pen portrait a blessed egg after this." of Napoleon III.:

"Short and stocky, he moves with a queer, sidelong gait, like a gouty crab, a man so wooden looking that you would expect his voice to come rasping out like a watchman's rattle; a complexion like crude tallow-marked for death whenever death wants him- ain't hens!"-London Answers. to be taken some time in half an hour or left, neglected by the skeleton king for years perhaps, if properly coddled.

"The mustache and imperial which the world knows, but ragged and bristly, concealing the mouth entirely, are moving a little nervously as the lips twitch: eyes sleepily watchful-furtive, stealthy, rather ignoble, like servants looking out of dirty windows and saying 'Nobody at home,' and lying as they say it.

"And withal a wonderful phlegm! He stands there as still and impassive as if carved in oak for a ship's figurehead. He looks not unlike one of those rude. inartistic statues. His legs are too still keeping up?"-Exchange. short, his body too long. He never looks well but on a throne or on a horse, as kings ought."

Conserving the Joy of Life. The most hopeful feature of the development of a new attitude toward Francisco"-New York Times. youth is the willingness to conserve the spirit of the joy of life-the great gift which youth has to offer to life ers and consolers, as recreators and To youth has been given this great joy of life, and it is the right of the individual to carry its spirit on into age, making it fuller and deeper as the derings or gather them around us at years roll on. The new movement is asserting the right of youth to its joy. recognizing that this is the creative force which will raise life from a dull level. It means less of the disenchantments of age, a keeping alive of the glow of life, cultivating an ever deepening optimism, so admirably expressed by those simple lines of Browning: Grow old along with me.

Making a Changeless Ink.

In shops where it is damp or chemical fumes are present it is usually difficult to cause labels to stick to bottles or cans. An ink for use on such containers is made as follows: Shellac, 20 grams; dissolve it in a hot solution of borax containing 30 grams of borax to

400 cubic centimeters of water; filter

while hot and add a solution made of gram; pierie acid, 0.1 gram, and ammonia, 15 grams, in water, 10 grams. It will be found that this ink works nicely and resists the usual chemical and corrosive fumes.-Cincinnati Com-

Boils, Felons and Carbuncles.

The location of the boil or carbuncle determines the amount of danger it may be to the patient. A boil can become a carbuncle, and pus from a carbuncle inoculated into a healthy person may cause either a boil or carbuncle. If a boil or carbuncle occurs in a locality where there is a rich blood and lymphatic area it at once becomes a source of danger, because the vessels spread the infection. Boils, carbuncles and felons are all due to infection by the streptococcus microbe. This means there are inflammation and pus present in these affections. Unless active treatment is instituted at the very beginning of inflammation there will be grave constitutional involvement which cannot be checked. To avoid serious results there should be impressed upon every one suffering from boils, carbuncles or felons the imperative need of having treatment by a physician at the first appearance of the affection. Delay will cause destruction of tissue, bone, deformity of a part

Making a Changeless Ink. In shops where it is damp or chemical fumes are present it is usually difficult to cause labels to stick to bottles or cans. An ink for use on such containers is made as follows: Shellac, 20 grams; dissolve it in a hot solution of borax containing 30 grams of borax to 400 cubic centimeters of water; filter while hot and add a solution made of aniline black. 8 grams: tannin, 0.3 Eat Rival for your stomach's sake. Accept no substitute gram; pierie acid, 0.1 gram, and ammonia, 15 grams, in water, 10 grams, It will be found that this ink works nicely and resists the usual chemical and corrosive fumes.-Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Boils, Felons and Carbuncles.

The location of the boil or carbuncle determines the amount of danger it may be to the patient. A boil can become a carbuncle, and pus from a carbuncle inoculated into a healthy person may cause either a boil or carbuncle. If a boil or carbuncle occurs in a locality where there is a rich blood and lymphatic area it at once becomes a source of danger, because the vessels spread the infection. Boils, carbuncles and felons are all due to infection by the streptococcus microbe. This means there are inflammation and pus present in these affections. Unless active treatment is instituted at the very beginning of inflammation there will be grave constitutional involvement which cannot be checked. To avoid serious results there should be impressed upon every one suffering from boils, carbuncles or felons the imperative need of having treatment by a physician at the first appearance of the affection. Delay will cause destruction of tissue, bone, deformity of a part

Life Boats Capsized.

No trace has been found of the body of Alfred G. Vanderbilt nor of Lindon Bates, Jr., Justus Miles Foreman, the writer, nor of Mr. and Mrs. man, the writer, nor of Mr. and Mrs. Elbert Hubbard. Survivors who arrived are confident that Mr. Vanderbilt perished.

Another passenger gives some word on the Hubbards. They had come on deck from the saloon after the blow and then turned to go below, apparently to get life belts. The ship went down before they could possibly return. It is the belief of many, confirmed by the reports of admiralty and steamship experts, that the Lusitania herself coffins hundreds of the dead, and there is serious discussion whether an effort shall not be made to blow up the hull in some way to release these bodies. She lies forty fathoms below the surface, which makes it too far down for divers to think of working there or to give any hope to the Cunard line that she may be lifted. Explosives, however, can be placed in her, and this may be

Mr. Bernard said he finished luncheon on the Lusitania at a quarter ofter 2 Friday afternoon and went straight to the veranda cafe, where looking forward. At first he thought it was a fish's tail, but be tions of the dead at Queenstown, and noticed the water seething a little among those who were established as around it, and the idea struck him then forward of the Lusitania's bows. The realization of what it actually was had hardly crystalized in his mind when he saw the torpedo stari.

It was fired just as we came level with the submarine, and struck up between the second and third funne 1, under the forward cabins and the bridge. It seemed to me the torpedo must have penetrated clean through. Then a terrific explosion inside blew right up through the four decks, throwing up a great column of coal dust, water and debris of all kinds. I dashed into the cafe just in time for down came the huge mass of water, breaking down the cutside awning. Some supposed this was sea water, but that is impossible. It was undoubtedly the contents of reat water tanks taken up by explosion. I am sure only one

In this latest and by far the gravest crisis that has arisen since the beginning of the European war the American people look with confidence to President Wilson. They feel secure with the destinies of the nation in his keeping.

The President and official Washington fully appreciate the gravity of the crisis which the destruction of the steamship Lusitania precipitated. They are unwilling to take any action until all the facts are known and the claims of the German government are presented.

President Wilson, by maintaining silence and refusing, at this time, to express any opinion as to what course the government will pursue and refusing absolutely, to express words The lawn is mine, and mine the fane of censure, has set a splendid example for the people to follow.

It is not proper for people to express their opinion too emphatically while the horror of the tragedy is still fresh.

The fact that more than six score of American citizens perished when the great ocean liner plunged to the bottom of the Irish Sea as the direct result of being torpedoed by a German submarine is calculated to inflame the people of this

This is a terrible time with more than half of the civilized world at war and all international law disregarded or openly violated by the European belligerents and the people must keep cool, act deliberately and without passion.

The German government has been asked for an official statement and when that statement is received the president will be better able to work out his course.

It is no time for jingo talk or idle criticism. The crisis is upon us and we must all stand by the man of peace who is warmer Monday; Tuesday increasing charged with the duty of guiding the nation through the most dangerous era of all history.

The American people have shown marvelous self control during the months of war which are now past and this latest | States weather bureau taken at crisis does not find them lacking in that regard. A firm determination to act only after mature consideration, guided by justice and, not passion or prejudice, will insure the safety of a great nation and a great people, now at peace in a world

Be calm and trust the President implicitly. Public sentiment must sustain his action in this crisis and in the other crises yet to come 'ere the war is ended, as it has in the past if his efforts to prevent this nation being plunged into war are to be crowned with success.

Nobody, aside from criminals, seems to care very much energetic. Blackmer & Tanquary about a policeman unless it is to "make fun of him."

The people should wake up to the fact that the policeman is about the most necessary and most faithful of public servants. It is the policeman who guards the life and property of the citizen while the citizen is asleep. All through the lonely night he must be constantly on guard and there is scarcely an hour of the time he is on duty that the life of the police man is not in danger.

The policeman is called for whenever danger threatens and he is expected to, and does, rush into the most dangerous places in search of violators of the law with never a thought for his personal safety.

Everyone of the multitude of dangerous duties he performs is accepted as a matter of course with scarcely ever a recognition which rises to the dignity of a thank you.

The man who becomes a policeman with the idea that he is only called upon to accept easy money soon arrives at a different conclusion, if he makes any serious effort to discharge these are appraised by experts erly trained he spends half the year his duty.

ORDER OF THE BATH.

It Was a Realistic Ceremony In the Time of Charles II.

The last Knights of the Bath made according to the ancient forms were at the coronation of Charles II., when various rites and ceremonies, one of which was bathing, were enforced. According to Froissart, the court barber prepared a bath, and the candidate for membership in the order, having been undressed by his esquires, was thereupon placed in the bath, his clothes and collars being the perquisites of the barber. He was then removed from the water to the words "May this be an honorable bath to you" and was placed in a plain bed quite wet and As soon as he was quite dry he was removed from the bed, dressed in new ind rich apparel and conducted by his sponsors to the chapel, where he offered a taper to the honor of God and a penny piece to the honor of the king. Then he went to the monarch and. kneeling before him, received from the royal sword a tap on the shoulder, the king exclaiming, "Arise. Sir -... and then embraced him, saying, "Be thou a good knight and true."-London Strand Magazine.

A few weeks ago the last passenger pigeon died in Chicago at the age of twenty-seven years. A passenger pigeon is quite a different looking bird from any other kind of pigeon. It has a long tail and is in all nearly three-quarters of a yard long. It is so called because of its migratory habits, it being a bird of passage. For the past fifteen years there had been a standing reward of $1,000 for a mate for this last survival of her race. This was several times its weight in gold, yet the offer produced no response. The passenger pigeon is absolutely extinct, and one of the most beautiful and useful of birds has been wiped out, as it were, under our very eyes .- New York i'ress.

London, May 10 .- Austrians and termans are fleeing from all parts of taly, according to a dispatch received here. All trains in the direction of the frontier are packed with Teutonic passengers, including merchants and officials. The dispatch continues:

"Special trains have brought 3,000 Germans from Rome, Florence and cologna en route to Germany. Lugano also is filled with refugees. Notice has been given of the suspension of the telephone service across the frontier and of the suppression of a great many passenger trains. All German and Austrian journalists have left

The Germans were in possession of Hill 60, southeast of Ypres, on May 6. according to an official British statement from the front. There is nothing to indicate that it has been retaken by the allies.

French troops have advanced some two miles over a front of more than four miles, south of Carancy. Berlin announces fresh gains northeast of Ypres, in which two villages, the heights of which command Ypres, were taken. The Austrian war office asserts that 100,000 Russian prisoners have been made in recent fighting in western Galicia and that Hungary has now been cleared of the invaders.

AN EVEN TRADE.

It Wasn't Made Simply Because the Law Wouldn't Allow It.

A traveling salesman for a Gansevoort street wholesale grocery firm, recently back from a trip through rough lands of a neighboring state, tells this possibly true tale:

Making a Changeless Ink.

In shops where it is damp or chemical fumes are present it is usually difficult to cause labels to stick to bottles or cans. An ink for use on such containers is made as follows: Shellac, 20 grams; dissolve it in a hot solution of borax containing 30 grams of borax to 400 cubic centimeters of water; filter while hot and add a solution made of aniline black, 8 grams; tannin, 0.3 gram; picric acid, 0.1 gram, and ammonia, 15 grams, in water, 10 grams. It will be found that this ink works nicely and resists the usual chemical and corrosive fumes .- Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Boils, Felons and Carbuncles. The location of the boil or carbuncle determines the amount tient. A boil can become a carbuncle, and pus from a carbuncle inoculated into a healthy person may cause either a boil or carbuncle. If a boil or carbuncle occurs in a locality where there is a rich blood and lymphatic area it at once becomes a source of danger, because the Bolls, carbuncles and felons are all due to infection by the streptococcus microbe. This means there are inflammation and pus present in these affections. Unless active treatment is instituted at the very beginning of inflammation there will be grave constitutional involvement which cannot be checked. To avoid serious results there should be impressed upon every one suffering from boils, carbuncles or felons the imperative need of having treatment by a physician at the first appearance of the affection.
